

Wenlock and Mandeville – the Olympic and Paralympic Mascots

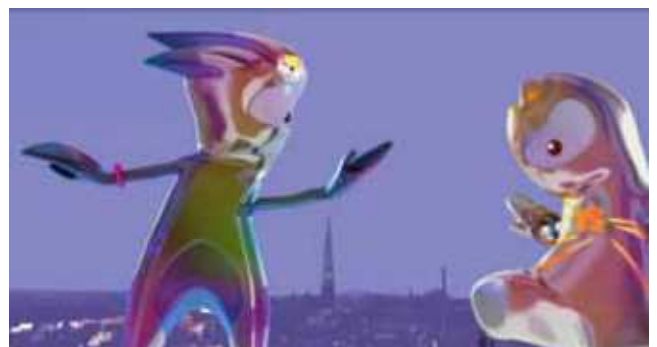

The drops of steel are transformed into two figures.

As a rainbow brightens, the figures come to life.
They are the London 2012 mascots.

Learning fast, the mascots imitate photographs of athletes.

The mascots appear shiny, reflecting the people, places and things they meet.

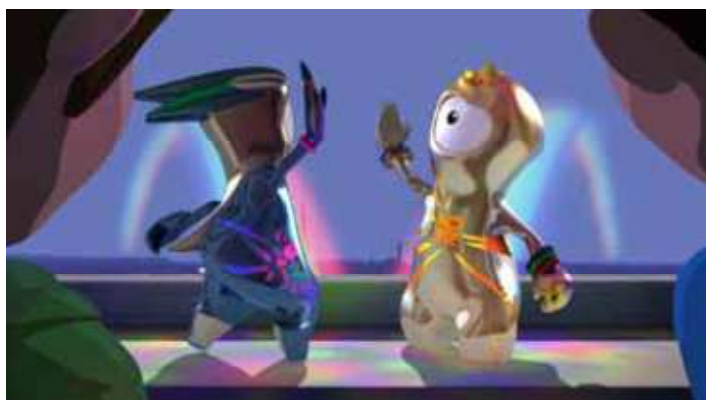

The figures are named as Wenlock, the Olympic mascot, from the town of Much Wenlock, and Mandeville, the Paralympic mascot, from the town of Stoke Mandeville.

On their journey, the mascots will capture everything they learn, and of course, they are excited to find out about all the Olympic and Paralympic sports.

In 2012, Wenlock and Mandeville will be there...

... and the whole world will be there!
